

fan

ish fanish.

the sports brand for people who half-care

Contents

One spine for a brand that lives in the feed: the story, the identity, and the covers-only carousel system that carries it.

01 Foundation

Brand story	04
Positioning	05
Brand values	06
Brand tone	07

02 Identity

Wordmark and lockups	09
Colour palette	10
Typography	11

03 Content System

The three cover kinds	13
A carousel in the wild	14

01

Foundation.

Brand story

Fanish is for the reluctant participant: the plus-one at the watch party, the group chat member who just wants the gist, the person dragged along who really wanted coffee and quiet.

The reader is smart, busy, and a little over it. They want the banter and the drama of a game, not the homework. So Fanish gives them exactly enough to hold their own in the Monday conversation and never one ounce more.

The lens is low-stakes and in on the joke. The sport is the absurd thing. The reader is never the butt of it. Fanish equips people to talk their way through, it never shames them for not caring.

THE PREMISE

Not a fan. Not not a fan. Fanish.

A sports app and content brand for people who half-care about sports and want the social side of a game without memorizing a rulebook. The whole posture lives in the word ish: an acceptable, reasonable level of caring.

The move is made easy without being dumbed down. Translate the sport through something the reader already knows: a bracket, detention rules, Ted Lasso. Get the gist in ten minutes, without turning it into your life.

ENJOY THE GAME. ish.

Positioning

Most sports media is built for the superfan: it assumes you already care and rewards you for knowing more. Fanish sits in the opposite corner, built for the outsider who wants in on the fun without the commitment.

The mission is to make sports feel survivable and a little funny for people who do not follow them. Inform without lecturing. Give the reader the one thing worth saying, then get out of the way.

That places Fanish alongside culture and lifestyle, not the box score. Sports are the occasion; the real subject is the watch party, the group chat, and the Monday conversation.

THE MAP

Brand values

The values are the operating system: they shape every hook, every caption, and every moment Fanish has someone's attention.

They hold the line between funny and mean, between easy and shallow. Whatever the sport, the reader should walk away feeling equipped and in on the joke.

01

Fan, not fanatic

Stake out the reasonable middle of caring and stay there. An acceptable level of interest, held with confidence.

02

Deadpan

Dry, low energy, unbothered. The funniest line is delivered flattest. Never hype, never a hard sell.

03

On the reader's side

Empathy, not condescension. We got you, you do not have to pretend. The sport is the absurd thing.

04

Made easy

Translate the sport through something the reader already knows. Obvious, not dumbed down.

05

Anti-homework

Define against effort. Enough to hold your own, never a rulebook to memorize.

06

Never punch down

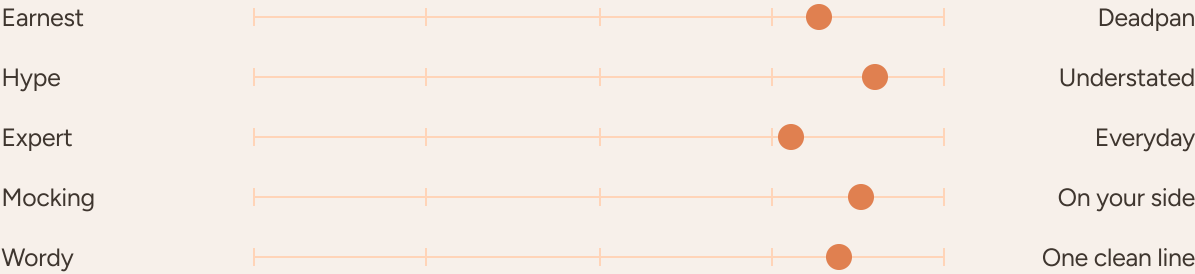

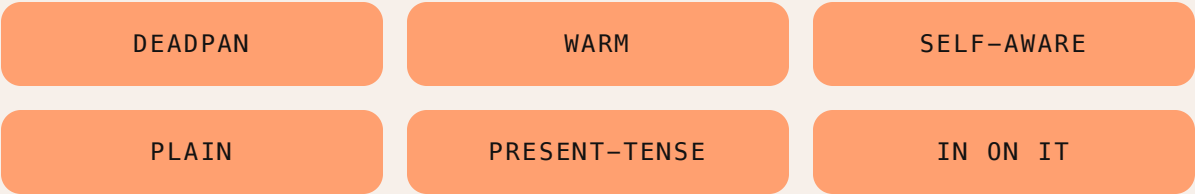

The institution and the megafan antics are fair game. A real person who can be hurt is not.

Brand tone

Tone is how Fanish sounds out loud. It is the smart, funny friend who hands you one good line to drop, never the breathless superfan.

Short sentences. Then a longer one for rhythm. Then short again. Sentence case, present tense, one point per tile. Structure lives in the layout, so the words stay clean.

The result reads like permission to not care, said with style.

02

Identity.

WORDMARK · COLOUR · TYPOGRAPHY

FAN

ISH

BRAND GUIDELINES

VERSION 01

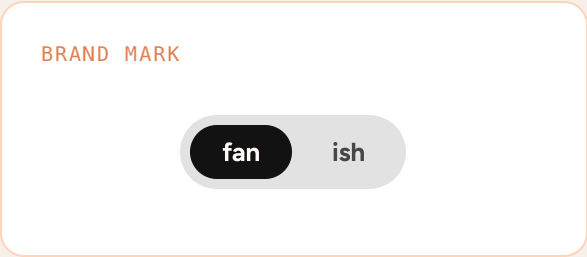

JULY 2026

Wordmark and lockups

The mark is the word itself. fanish. is set in Gelasio italic, always lowercase, always closed with the soft dot. It is one of only two sanctioned lowercase strings, alongside the closer enjoy the game. ish.

The fan/ish toggle is the brand mark. It sits bottom-centre on every cover and stands in for the logo wherever the wordmark is already present.

All running copy stays sentence case. The lowercase belongs to the wordmark and the closer only.

DO NOT

Never capitalise. The wordmark is lowercase.

Never drop the soft dot. It is part of the mark.

Never recolour. Coral is the only accent.

Colour palette

Coral owns action. Ocean owns information. The two are never swapped, and coral is the only hardcoded accent.

Content carries no colour of its own; the frozen design system fills it. Every social cover renders in fan mode (light). Ish mode (dark) is the in-app counterpart.

Sibling schemes Ocean, Crimson and Violet live inside the app. Coral is the default and the social face of the brand.

ACCENTS

CORAL / ACTION #FFA070	CORAL STRONG #E08050	CORAL SOFT #FFD4B8	OCEAN / INFO #2554A0
--	--	--	--

FAN MODE (LIGHT)

PAGE #FFF8F4	CARD #FFE8DA	TEXT #121212	TEXT 2 #9A7B6B	DIVIDER #FFD4B8
------------------------------------	------------------------------------	------------------------------------	--------------------------------------	---------------------------------------

ISH MODE (DARK)

PAGE #121212	CARD #1E1A24	TEXT #FFF8F4	TEXT 2 #6B6575	DIVIDER #2A2530
------------------------------------	------------------------------------	------------------------------------	--------------------------------------	---------------------------------------

Typography

Two families carry the brand. Figtree is the UI sans: headlines, labels, numerals and captions. Gelasio is the editorial serif, always italic, held back for hooks, Smart Lines and pull quotes.

The template sets the voice. A text hook is Gelasio italic; a media card is roman. One headline is never half italic and half roman.

Numerals are tabular so scores and stats line up cleanly.

Figtree carries the UI

FIGTREE · VARIABLE 100 TO 900 · SANS · HEADLINES, LABELS, NUMERALS, CAPTIONS

Gelasio speaks in italic

GELASIO · EDITORIAL SERIF · ALWAYS ITALIC · HOOKS, SMART LINES, PULL QUOTES

HIERARCHY

Display 28	Group stage
Title 20	The Monday line
Body 14	Enough to hold your own.
Caps 9	PERFORMANCE

03

Content System.

THE COVERS-ONLY CAROUSEL, IN THE WILD

FAN ISH

BRAND GUIDELINES VERSION 01

JULY 2026

The three cover kinds

Fanish ships covers-only carousels on Instagram and TikTok, rendered by one frozen design system so every tile is pixel-identical to the app feed. Every post is built from three cover kinds.

The tiles opposite are real renders straight out of the pipeline. Captions aim for five hashtags and are never all-sports: at least one is a culture tag, and the brand tag #Fanish is always last.

THREE KINDS, ONE SYSTEM • REAL RENDERS

A Text hook

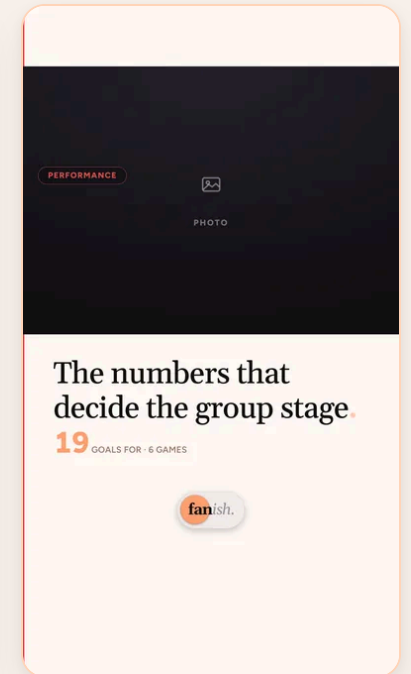

A take with no photo, set in Gelasio italic. One phrase carries the coral highlight.

B Repurposed media

A borrowed photo or clip in a rounded inset, roman headline, no category pill.

C Ish-card

Full-bleed media plus a category pill and an optional big coral stat.

EVERY CAROUSEL OPENS ON ONE OF THESE THREE.

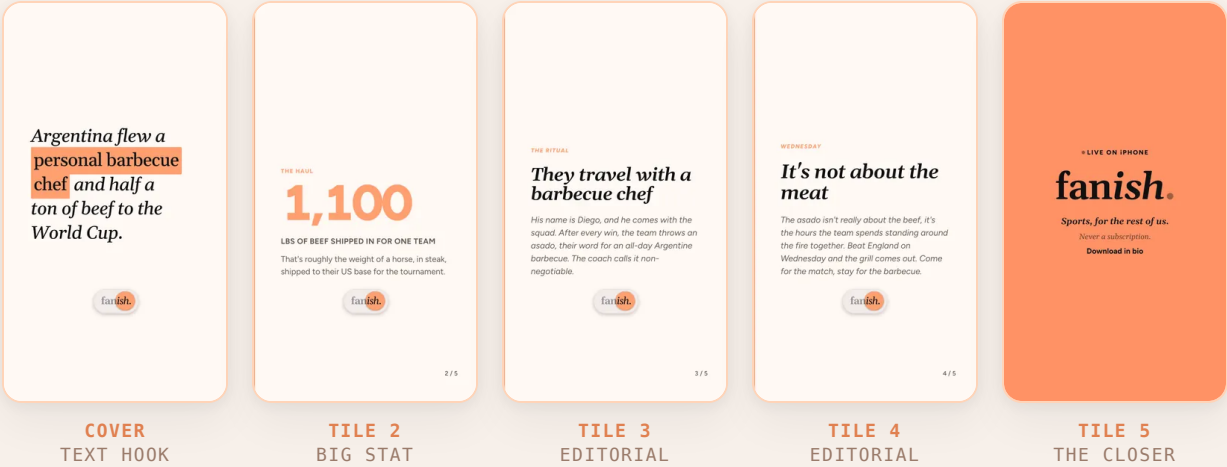

A carousel in the wild

One published Fanish carousel, end to end. It opens on a text hook, hands over a single big stat, carries two editorial tiles, and closes on the coral call to action.

The story: Argentina flew a personal barbecue chef and a ton of beef to the World Cup. Low stakes, a little funny, and exactly enough to say something Monday.

Same frozen system, same voice, five tiles. This is the end product the rest of the book describes.

ONE CAROUSEL · FIVE TILES · AS PUBLISHED

Enjoy the game. ish.